第三部分：阅读理解（共两节，40 分）

第一节：（共 15 小题；每小题 2 分，共 30 分）

阅读下列短文，从每题所给的 A、B、C、D 四个选项中，选出最佳选项，并在答题卡上将该项涂黑。

A

Walking down a path through some woods in Georgia, I saw a small pool of water ahead on the path. I angled my direction to go around it on the part of the path that wasn't covered by water or mud. As I reached the pool, I was suddenly attacked! Yet I did nothing for the attack. It was so unpredictable and from somewhere totally unexpected. I was surprised as well as unhurt though I had been struck four or five times. I backed up a foot and my attacker stopped attacking me. Had I been hurt I wouldn't have found it amusing. And I was laughing. After all, I was being attacked by a butterfly!

Having stopped laughing, I took a step forward. My attacker rushed me again. He charged towards me at full speed, attempting to hurt me but in vain. For a second time, I took a stop backwards while my attacker paused. I wasn't sure what to do. After all, it's just not everyday that one is attacked by a butterfly. I stepped back to look the situation over. My attacker moved back to land on the ground. That's when I discovered why my attacker was charging me only moments earlier. He had a mate and she was dying.

Sitting close beside her, he opened and closed his wings as if to fan her. I could only admire the love and courage of that butterfly in his concern for his mate. He had taken it up on himself to attack me for his mate's sake, even though she was clearly dying and I was so large. He did so just to give her those extra few precious moments of life, should I have been careless enough to step on her. His courage in attacking something thousands of times larger and heavier than himself just for his mates' safety seemed admirable. I couldn't do anything other than reward him by walking on the more difficult side of the pool. He had truly earned those moments to be with her, undisturbed.

Since then, I've always tried to remember the courage of that butterfly whenever I see huge barriers facing me.

56. Why did the writer change his direction while walking down a path?
A. To get close to a butterfly.　　B. To look over the bad situation.
C. To escape a sudden attack.　　D. To avoid getting his shoes dirty.

57. What made the man feel funny?
A. Making the attacker pause.
B. Being attacked by a butterfly.
C. Being stepped on by his mate.
D. Discovering the energetic butterfly.

58. From this experience the man learned _____.
A. what he should do when faced with trouble
B. people should show sympathy to the weak
C. how he should deal with attacks
D. people should protect butterflies

59. Which of the following word can best describe the butterfly?
A. Careless　　B. Amusing.　　C. Courageous.　　D. Aggressive.

How Many Lies Do the Children Tell You?

Mothers who feel their children don't appreciate them can add another grievance to the list: half the time, their children are lying to them. A study designed to expose the truth about lying shows that undergraduates lie to their mothers in 46% of their conversations. Still, mums should feel better than total strangers, who are told lies an astonishing 77% of the time.

Bella Depaulo and a team of psychologists from the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, asked 77 undergraduates to keep a record of all their conversations for a week, and wrote down whether they lied at any time. DePaulo named lying broadly, as "when you intentionally try to mislead someone", so she would catch the smallest of lies.

The students told an average of two lies a day. They said they had been studying when they had been out drinking. One told his parents that a textbook cost $50 rather than $20 --- so that they would send him extra money. Female students constantly told their plain-looking roommates that they were pretty. "They are everyday lies," says DePaulo.

DePaulo and her colleagues conclude that people tend to tell fewer lies to those they feel closest to. College students lied to their best friends 28% of the time but lied to acquaintances 48% of the time. In close relationships, people were more likely to tell "kind-hearted" lies, designed to protect feelings, rather than self-serving lies.

Romantic (浪漫的)partners fall somewhere between close friends and acquaintances. Students lied to romantic partners about a third of the time. DePaulo thinks that unmarried lovers can expect less honesty than best friends because of the insecurity that comes with romance.

Mothers can take heart from one other finding. They may have been lied to, but at least their children talked to them. The students were recorded telling few lies to their fathers --- because they had virtually no interaction with them.

60. What is the meaning of the underlined word "grievance" in Paragraph 1?
A. Opinion.　　B. Complaint.　　C. Belief.　　D. Difficulty.

61. According to the passage college students felt closest to____.
A. Mothers.　　B. Best friends.　　C. Acquaintances.　　D. Romantic partners.

62. Female students lied to their roommates to ____.
A. get money from them　　B. offer them the services
C. gain more security　　D. make them happy

63. What is the purpose of this article?
A. To present a fact.　　B. To argue an idea.
C. To tell a story.　　D. To explain a theory.

C

Since the Second World War, there has been an obvious trend, especially among the growing group of college students, toward early marriage. Many youths begin dating in the first stage of adolescence, "go steady" through high school, and marry before their formal education has been completed. In some quarters, there is much shaking of graying heads over the unacceptable ways of youth. However, emotional(情感的) maturity does not grow with age; it does not arrive automatically at twenty-one or twenty-five. Some achieve it surprisingly early, while others never do, even in three-score years and ten.

Many students are marrying as an escape, not only from an unsatisfying home life, but also from their own personal problems of loneliness. However, any marriage entered into as an escape cannot prove entirely successful. The sad fact is that marriage seldom solves one's problems; more often, it merely worsens them. What's more, it is doubtful whether the home is able to carry all that the young are seeking; they might abandon one idol(幻像) only to have another. Young people correctly understand that their parents are wrong in believing that success is the most important in life, but they themselves are wrong in believing that they have found the true center of life's meaning. Their expectations of marriage are basically unrealistic and therefore can not be met. They want too much, and tragic disillusionment(幻想破灭) is often likely to follow.

Shall we, then, join the chorus of those against early marriages? One cannot generalize: all early marriages are bad and all later ones are good. Satisfactory marriages are determined not by how old one is, but by the emotional maturity of the partners. Therefore, each case must be judged on its own benefits. If the early marriage is not an escape, if it is entered into with relatively few false expectations, and if it is economically workable, why not? Good marriages can be made from sixteen to sixty, and so can bad ones.

64. The author thinks the idea of marriage as an escape is _____.
A. acceptable B. controversial C. immature D. unreasonable

65. The author argues that _____.
A. young people can benefit little from early marriages
B. elderly people are wrong about early marriages
C. early marriages are not always unsuccessful
D. early marriages should not be encouraged

66. What's the main idea of the passage?
A. Young people's failure in marriage results from disillusionment.
B. Young people shouldn't have many expectations for marriage.
C. Successful marriages depend on emotional maturity.
D. Home is the place where you get rid of loneliness.

D

Wal-Mart is not just the world's largest retailer(零售商). It's the world's largest company，which sells in three months what number-two retailer Home Depot sells in a year.

Wal-Mart exercises its power for just one purpose: to bring the lowest possible prices to its customers. At Wal-Mart, that goal is never reached. The retailer has a clear policy for suppliers: On basic products that don't change, the price Wal-Mart will pay, and will charge shoppers, must drop year after year. But what almost no one outside the world of Wal-Mart and none of its 21,000 suppliers know is the high cost of those low prices. To survive in the face of its pricing demands, makers of everything from bikes to jeans have had to close US plants in favor of obtaining products from abroad.

Indeed, the real story of Wal-Mart, the story that never gets told, is the story of the pressure the biggest retailer constantly applies to its suppliers in the name of bringing us "every day low prices".

The giant retailer's low prices often come with a high cost. Wal-Mart's pressure can crush the companies it does business with and force them to send jobs overseas. Are we shopping our way straight to the unemployment line? Of course, US companies have been moving jobs offshore for decades, long before Wal-Mart was a retailing power. But there is no question that the chain is helping accelerate the loss of American jobs to low-wage countries such as Thailand.

People ask, "How can it be bad for things to come into the US cheaply?" Sure, it's great to have bargains. But you can't buy anything if you're not employed.

There is no question that Wal-Mart's drive to squeeze out cost has benefited consumers. By now, it is accepted wisdom that Wal-Mart makes the companies it does business with more efficient and focused. Wal-Mart itself is known for continuous improvement in its ability to handle, move, and track goods. It is legendary (传奇) for forcing its suppliers to redesign everything from their packaging to their computer systems. It is also legendary for quite straightforwardly telling them what it will pay for their goods.

67. How do suppliers meet the requirements of Wal-Mart?
A. To sell even more goods in three months.
B. To cut down the employment rate sharply.
C. To charge shoppers at a much higher price.
D. To run the business in a well-organized way.

68. Wal-Mart's low price policy results in_____.
A. more high-paying jobs
B. better designed packages
C. bigger profit of its partners
D. more jobless American workers

69. What can we infer from the passage?
A. Still more quality goods will be provided.
B. The food you get at Wal-Mart costs least.
C. The value of Mal-Mart is over assessed.
D. Wal-Mart is a very demanding company.

70. What's the best title for the passage?
A. The Fortune Wal-Mart Makes
B. The Wal-Mart you don't know
C. The Biggest Retailer—Wal-Mart
D. The Money-saving Tip in Wal-Mart

Meaning of Happiness

"Are you happy?" I asked my brother, Lan, one day,

"Yes．No．It depends what you mean," he said．

"Then tell me," I said, "when was the last time you think you were happy?"

"April 1967,"he said,

It served me right for putting a serious question to someone who has joked his way through life．But Lan's answer reminded me that when we think about happiness, we usually think of something extraordinary, a pinnacle（顶点） of sheer （纯粹的） delight,__71__ __72__ I remember playing police and robbers in the woods, getting a speaking part in the school play．Of course, kids also experience lows, but their delight at such peaks of pleasure as winning a race or getting a new bike is unreserved．

In the teenage years, the concept of happiness changes．__73__ I can still feel the pain of not being invited to a party that almost everyone else was going to．I also remember the great happiness of being invited at another event to dance with a very handsome young man．

In adulthood the things that bring great joy —birth, love, marriage —also bring responsibility and the risk of loss．Love may not last; loved ones die．For adults, happiness is complex．

My dictionary defines "happy" as "lucky" or "fortunate"．But I think a better definition of happiness is "the ability to enjoy something"．__74__ It's easy to overlook the pleasure we get from loving and being loved, the company of friends, the freedom to live where we please, even good health．

While happiness may be more complex for us, the solution is the same as ever．Happiness isn't about what happens to us; it's the ability to find a positive for every negative, and view a difficulty as a challenge．__75__

A．For a child, happiness has a magic quality．

B．You never know where happiness will turn up next．

C．So we chase it and make it equal to wealth and success．

D．And those pinnacles seem to get rarer, the older we get．

E．The more we can enjoy what we have, the happier we are．

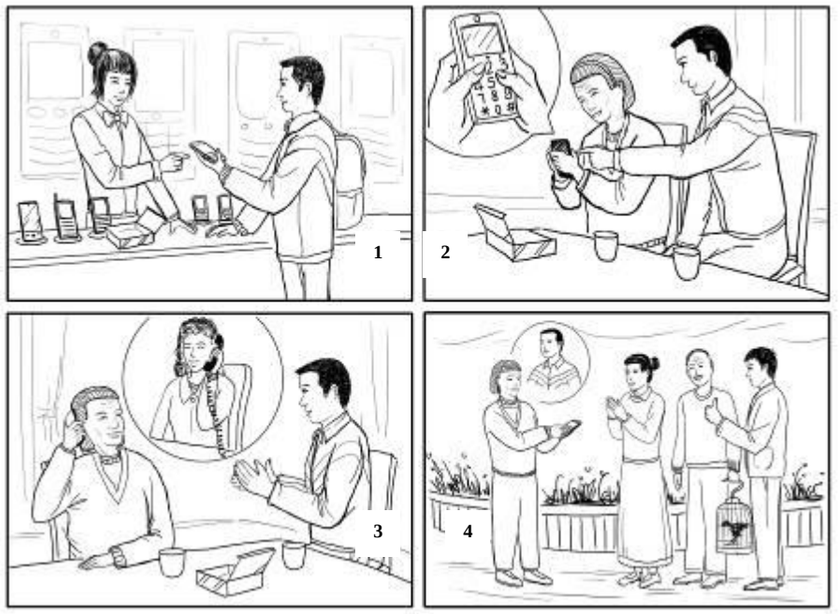

F．It's not wishing for what we don't have, but enjoying what we do possess．

G．Suddenly it's conditional on such things as excitement, love, and popularity．
